user Thats it. Just be careful if you do start the program (rename the file to .exe), and if you do choose the "keep my documents", then when you close the .exe the "recent documents" and files saved to the disc. 1. Be sure to rename your file to ".st.exe". That's the only thing I can't get it to work. I've tried everything but still doesn't work. I'll keep trying. 2. It doesn't seem to like any file names that are in a folder. So if I go to the folder and open all the .exe files that are in that folder, none of them will run. 3. I just installed it to my documents folder. It does say keep my documents, but when I close the .exe and go to my documents, the "recent documents" and all the files on my disc are still there. Cant you just tell it to use the recently documents folder? I have it set to "just like windows", then I don't have to go to my documents folder everytime. i made a desktop shortcut and used regedit to add HKCR\txt then added my text file from the C:\Users\username\Desktop and it works for me. Is there anything else i should do? i mean what else is there to do if you have it set to "just like windows"? I've tried that, and it didn't work. But the one time I did it before with regedit, it worked. How can I get it to work without changing the system directory? I just want to be able to have it work how it did the first time. For those of you who didn't find a way to fix it, I was able to figure it out. The "double" quotes that were in there, were messing it up. I just removed them, and now it works like a charm! This program IS working on me! I'm using a "new" installation of 7, and when I tried to run the .exe file through this program, it says the .exe is corrupt. I then tried to run it through trial version of the program, and it worked! I had to rename it, because it kept trying to run it in the old directory. If someone can post some tips on how to avoid this problem, it would be great! Hi, 82157476af
